Educational Toys For Toddlers

By Low Jeremy

Have you ever experienced getting an invitation to a birthday party of your beloved 2-year old niece or nephew and do not know what to give? The moment you step into the toy store you find yourself in the midst of fascinating toys and you just can't decide which one to pick.

Well, if you have, then I'm sure that these five tips will be a big help to you in choosing the best toy to give -- toys that are fun but still educational.

Tip number one is to be sure that you are buying a toy that really is for a toddler. Sometimes we may over-estimate them and treat them like bigger children.

But no matter what many may think, you should still buy a toy that fits in the age range of a toddler. If you buy a toy that isn't, there is a large possibility that the child won't like it. Also, try not to buy toys with detachable parts because the child might swallow it.

Tip number two is to choose something that will help the child build abilities or skills that aid them, when they grow up, in their academics. Remember that a child will be at his or her best when he or she is open to letters, numbers and sounds at a young age.

So that the child will be interested, you can look for blocks, books, flashcards or puzzles with bright colors. Some toys can even talk to children. These kind of toys are a big help to the children.

The third tip is to make sure that the child as well as the parent will like it. Look for something like a book. You can easily spot toddler books because they are usually made from cardboard and are colorful.

Some books have sounds and they recite nursery rhymes. Some have pop-ups and fur for the kids to touch. It is better for parents to read to their child, to show the child that learning is very much important.

Fourth is not to be carried away. Remember that giving the biggest and best gift isn't the most important part of a present. Choose something that won't empty your pockets but will still fill the happiness of the child. Give a gift that will help them in learning at the same time be enjoyable.

The last tip is to always be creative. When you shop for the toy, think of something original yet not too weird.

In short, when you are choosing a gift in a toy store, remember that the toy you are about to give should be creative and interesting. Remember that it should fit the age of the child. Just don't forget to wrap the gift, and don't give it bare to the toddler!

The Value Of Classic Wooden Toys

By Marina Neiman

Wooden toys are an excellent way to provide hours of educational and stimulating play for children of all ages.

Classic handmade wooden are available for purchase and these toys make wonderful gifts and additions to the toy box. The reason that educational wooden toys are so valuable is because they help children learn how to create something on their own. They can spend time every day with these toys and never grow tired of them.

Parents can encourage a child to use his imagination with wooden toys like those found at <http://www.1888Toys.com>. There are simple wooden cars and other vehicles that are perfect for toddlers and wooden blocks are always a good choice. Children can play for hours with educational wooden toys, especially if they are high quality handmade toys.

There are so many benefits for children who play with educational wooden toys. They learn how to use their imaginations and they are the ones who figure out how to manipulate the cars and trucks. You don't need motorized vehicles for that. Blocks let kids learn how to put together structures that are sturdy and each time they build they can make something different.

When you decide to purchase wooden toys you will want to look for the ones that are high quality and made to last. When you purchase wooden toys of high quality you are providing not only your children but any future grandchildren with toys that will be passed down from generation to generation. There are very few children who do not enjoy playing with wooden toys.

So many things can be learned from wooden toys. The educational benefits almost outweigh the entertainment benefits. Children who are given educational wooden toys are delighted with these toys and use them time and time again.

It's hard to beat the value provided by classic wooden toys.
